UNFINISHED REVOLUTIONS: TELLING THE STORIES WE DIDN'T KNOW WERE MISSING

How do we tell stories that truly reflect the communities we serve? This engaging presentation explores how libraries and cultural institutions can uncover, interpret, and share more inclusive narratives, centering the voices of historically underrepresented populations including Indigenous communities, people of color, immigrants, women, and more. Through the lens of Unfinished Revolutions, participants will gain fresh perspective on the stories we may be missing, along with practical ideas for programs, collections, and partnerships that foster deeper connection, cultural awareness, and community engagement.

Kimberly Phyfe is a writer, photographer, public speaker, and podcaster. She works as the Community Engagement Manager at Three Village Historical Society & Museum in Setauket. Kimberly holds her Masters Degrees in Literacy and Education, serves on the planning commission for Long Island 250, and is a Trustee of the Long Island Museum Association.
